Amanda

Welcome home

Home Hotel Amanda sits right on Haugesund's inner harbour
— part of the Home Hotel family, where every stay feels personal.

Step through the door and you'll understand the name. Home Hotel Amanda is built around the idea that a hotel stay shouldn't feel like a hotel stay at all. The interiors are warm and lived-in, with portraits from Norwegian film history lining the walls — a nod to the Amanda Award, the country's own film prize, after which the hotel is named.

The building has welcomed guests since 1930, with a fresh, newly renovated character throughout. As part of the Home Hotel chain, Amanda follows a simple promise: breakfast, fika and dinner are always included, every day of your stay, so you can settle in and relax like you're visiting family.

Built for two wheels

No tunnels, easy roads, and the open coast all the way to the Hardangerfjord — Haugesund is made for cycling.

Home Hotel Amanda has quietly become a favourite stop for cyclists, and it shows. The hotel offers secure bike storage and a wash station, so your bike gets the same care as you do. The surrounding roads are famously gentle on cyclists, winding along the coast with sweeping views and barely a tunnel in sight.

Whether you're heading out for an afternoon loop or setting off on a longer ride toward the Hardangerfjord or Jostedalsgreen, the hotel's relaxed, knowledgeable staff are happy to share their favourite routes. After a day in the saddle, the hotel's daily fika — fresh coffee, tea and home-baked cake — is the perfect way to recover.

Every room has a story

From the reception desk to the pillow, Home Hotel Amanda is designed to make you feel like you've arrived somewhere familiar.

The reception sets the tone — warm, unfussy, and genuinely welcoming. From there, each of the hotel's 133 rooms continues the story, decorated with local touches that connect guests to Haugesund itself. Look out for the small details on the walls of each room: a scan of the QR code reveals a little more about the place pictured.

Rooms range from compact singles to spacious suites and family rooms, all finished with wood floors, comfortable beds and the same home-like warmth that runs through the whole hotel. Many rooms offer views over the harbour or the courtyard on request.

Not your typical conference hotel

Five meeting rooms, a harbourside terrace, and everything guests need within walking distance — meetings here come with a view.

Home Hotel Amanda offers five flexible meeting rooms with capacity for up to 80 delegates, making it a natural choice for courses, conferences and sales meetings alike. The setting is anything but corporate: guests step out to a quayside lined with restaurants, with the city's shops and culture only minutes away on foot.

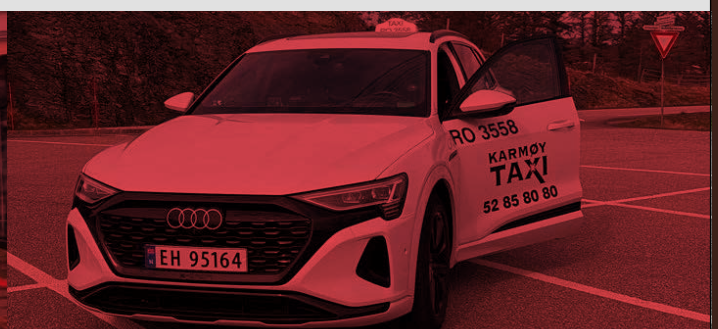

For groups looking to do more than sit in a meeting room, the hotel can arrange GoViking activities to get delegates outside and moving. Lunch and dinner are served on site, with seasonal menus and vegetarian options always available — so the only thing left to plan is the agenda.
